Well my new made to measure suit has arrived. Unfortunately I must have grown a few inches since being measured.

Fortunately Otter were very good about it and kindly offered to make a new suit. So pockets (my old suit) expecting to be out at stud by now is having to soldier on for a few more weeks.

The first league tables are published this month, and would you believe it yours truly is top of the charts. It can only mean that I've been the only one to submit the Marshall Sheets.

This is the pre Xmas edition so on behalf of the entire Freeflow editorial, writer and print staff we all wish you a Merry Xmas and a Prosperous New Year. We also wish to thank all contributors for putting pen to paper or camera to eye and especially all those contributing to my collection of Page 3 Luvilies.

The Chairman's Knock

We are now approaching the Christmas "closedown" of the club, with the quiz night on the 13th December at the Fox Inn (for tickets see Sue or Pete), so no club again until Tuesday 10th January 2006. If you are doing any diving over xmas period please email and let everyone in the club know. There is a trip planned to Capernwray during the holidays, details to be sent out soon, for details of the site go to www.dive-site.co.uk or see January 05 freeflow.

Next years Tuesday evening calendar will be put on the website soon, so keep checking. I am still on the lookout for more people to give interest talks so let me know if you want to.

The annual awards "do" has been booked for Saturday 21st January 2006 at Lutterworth Golf Club, details of tickets etc will be sent out by email soon . This really is a good night and the more club members there the better, you could even be in for an award!!!!

Two 2006 trip planning evenings were held recently, and it looks like the club and boats are in for another busy year (there are still plenty of weekends available). The new trip list will be on the website soon, so check it out and get your names down and deposits paid as soon as possible – places go quick!

To help with planning trips the list of boathandlers/diver coxs will be added to the downloads section of the website soon.

An open forum was held recently and the points raised are detailed in this issue of Freeflow.

Hope you all have a great Xmas.

Regards

Roj

Open Forum – 15th November 2005

Please find below the various items discussed at the recent open forum evening:-

- Spaces on trips for newly qualified divers – It was felt that new divers in the club were struggling to get on trips. I advised them to attend the next two 2006 dive planning trip evenings so as to get their names forward and so that trip organisers can ascertain the demand, experience, etc.
- Whose who – many of the newer members were unsure who the committee members, instructors were – photo card/profiles were discussed and are currently under development by Ian Jennings (membership secretary). Also maybe details to appear in freeflow.
- Pictures for Rogues gallery to be submitted to Neil Brown for inclusion – this also needs to be updated with current members.
- Pool – swimming club have been late getting out of pool on a couple of occasions, this is to be monitored by pool marshall and reported to centre management for action if required.
- Training 2006 – dive leader/nitrox/skills practice all in the pipeline, please see emails/updates from the training officer.
- Trips – some to be planned where diving is secondary and chartwork/planning/boat handling are primary purpose.
- Boats – the boats will be out of action until end of January 2006 for maintenance works, new radios, etc. (they can be available if adequate notice given to Nigel).
- New DSC radio has been purchased for Lucky Dip, with boat to be rewired when fitted.
- Flares – possibility of letting off old flares when RNLI attend to receive cheque following snorkelling – RNLI to be approached to arrange.
- Current membership – stands at 80 members, 76 members is the break even point for budgets.
- BBQ's – stoney cove have now banned bbqs at the cove due to hazard – I am to write on behalf of the club and show objection.
- Social events – more to be encouraged, maybe a social secretary if a willing volunteer? Names to chairman please!!

It was quite a poor turn out and so for the next meeting please remember this is your club and come along and have your say.

Regards

Chairman Roj

The DO's Bit

Well hopefully this article will have made it into Freeflow, as always I like to sneak these things in on the 13th Hour

The past year as ever has been busy and as ever has passed by in a blur. And looking at the new trip calendar that is shaping up it looks as though next year is going to be the same. The calendar is still fairly liquid but details are taking shape and can be found on the club website and of course we will bring in paper copies.

Next years Tuesday Night schedule is almost complete and will be published shortly, just need to put in the interest evenings. You will see that the pool marshal names have changed slightly so please look and if you can do your bit I would much appreciate it. If you could also remember to fill in the book at the pool it would keep are image nice and clean.

For those of you who are thinking of hanging your fins for the winter then don't, I am told that Stoney Cove is getting quieter and the visibility is fairly damn good, might be getting a bit on the chilly side though. I might just have to go and find out on Wednesday☺

I am pleased to say that I am starting to get in lots of completed dive log sheets and I am sure Ian will have a report somewhere else in this edition of Freeflow, so if you want to win that bottle then keep them coming.

When you are going diving if you could let me know, just as much out of courtesy as well to ensure you are covered by the BSAC insurance. I can be contacted in a number of ways, however most of the time at work my mobiles seem to be in a dead spot. But here goes anyway

Training Officer's Musing

Hi all I would like to say thanks to all who voted me into the position of training officer I know who you are and I will remember.

We have had a very good year on the training front Ocean diver completed with Theory exams to be on Tuesday 8th December along with some of the sports diver's, still a few need to do catch-up lectures.

A new intake of trainees is always good and especially good with cross over divers from PADI this brings new ideas into the club and helps to keep it fresh.

I have received some returns From the Skill Development Course (SDC) hand out from the 22nd, see below, if you are interested in any of the SDC's check out www.bsac.org the SDC section and return to me.

From this I will take the most popular and what I believe are beneficial to the club i.e. lifesaver and introduce this in to the training programme for next year.

GET YOUR LOG BOOKS SIGNED AFTER EACH LECTURE

I am in the process along with Roger and Fran of organising an advanced Nitrox course to start in February I would encourage all that intend to go on the Red Sea trip to attend this. Sports Diver will start early next year along with Dive Leader, Dive Leader will extend and stretch your Knowledge and in particular your experience.

GET YOUR LOG BOOKS SIGNED AFTER EACH LECTURE

I am also arranging an Instructor Evening; this is planned at present for 24th January 06 this is for all Instructors including assistant instructors.

This is to ensure we are all up to date with the latest BSAC methods and techniques and that we are all singing from the same song sheet (for Roger), it will be a time for a bit of Instructor Bonding sharing of ideas and a few beers.

Remember the training and assessment is the small part you need to practice and practice it pays off

Anyway keep it wet

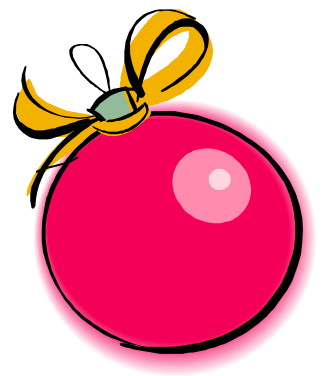

A HAPPY CHRISTMAS TO EVERYONE AT THE LUTTERWORTH SUB AQUA DIVING CLUB.

I HOPE THAT YOUR NEXT YEAR'S SEASON IS A GOOD ONE AND THAT THE CLUB CONTINUES TO GO FROM STRENGTH TO STRENGTH.

BEST WISHES AND A GREAT NEW YEAR

FROM

MARY PEARSON

Traditionally the strength of the wind and the state of the sea is measured by the Beaufort Wind Scale.

When a group of sub aqua divers arrange a weekend away, there's inevitably a storm and they have to shelter in the pub.

Pints	Description	Criterion
0	Stone Cold Sober	Able to stand unaided, everything in focus, smoke rises vertically, drinks only bought when cajoled, sensible conversation abounds.
1	Feeling Warm	Very slight deviation from course, but no stumbling, dive organised for next Sunday, voices kept low to exclude non favourites
2	Slight Inebriation	Some incoherence, eyes have glassy appearance, occasional slur. Past dives discussed, some exaggeration, depths marginally increased, boat speed more or less accurate.
3	Gentle Glow	Barmaid becoming more attractive, some bantering, drink bought for stranger. Depths always exaggerated, times doubled, enjoyment factor of last expedition doubled. Boat speed increasing noticeably. Decompression times lengthening. Water becoming warmer/colder/darker/clearer.
4	Moderate Inebriation	Pronounced slurring, voices increase in volume, some bad jokes re-told, offers of drinks to entire group. Last near miss made to sound as if planned, all wrecks now 20 metres deeper and visibility greatly increased/decreased. Much talk of portholes, some skepticism.

- 5 Well On Speech becomes incoherent, some foaming, barmaid appears drop dead gorgeous, more pints ordered (Chance of some spray) Speed of boat in knots over-estimated by factor of two. Some slight references to curry/kebab/chinky/pizza.
- 6 Half Newt Tables move, pattern on carpet becomes fuzzy, jokes get worse, (Probably some spray). Boat now unbeatable, weather last time out worst/best in living memory, depths and times now increase by a factor of four. Renowned club member now takes two hours to kit up while buddies hang on shot line waiting for him. Some kit may be purchased at inflated prices.
- 7 Full Newt Whole pub in motion, next dive planned - Death Rock. Deposits taken, and used for next round. Some mention of "curry and chinky" many bags of nuts and crisps purchased. Barmaid is Pamela Anderson (and she wants you!). Conger/Lobster is so large it moves the wreck when swimming, hence wreck is never in the same place twice. (Or sat-nav is useless due to US military screwing up the signal). Inconvenience may be felt when walking to the loo.
- 8 Semi smashed Immediate trip to Scapa Flow organised, some glass breaking, insults are extensive. Beer is spread over adjoining tables, new round ordered, kitty is increased. Immediate trip to Titanic is on the cards. More talk of curry/kebabs. Tackle may be placed on the pool table. Locals warned about the dangers of decompression. Boat now capable of 60 knots even with plug lead shorting onto engine casing. Boat keys lost, progress generally impeded.
- 9 Near Smashed Table dancing is commenced, some structural damage, some falling. Bones may break, injuries may go unnoticed, friends may refuse to acknowledge that assistance is required. Broken colleague is returned to chalet, dumped on bunk and covered with wet-suit for comfort. All return to pub, (chimney pots and slates removed).

10 Smashed

Seldom experienced before collapse, dives organised to Red Sea and Scapa Flow for the same week, equipment lent to club pratt, offers of marriage to barmaid/barman. Boat now quicker than "Bluebird", last dive - 60 metres, sitting on the coning tower for 45 minutes, three hours decompression required. Some moans from chalet, severe swelling may be evident, all cries are ignored. Some spray, much foam. Ornamental trees may be uprooted.

11 Nitroxed

60 metre dive to some wreck not far away organised, more deposits taken, new round ordered, many full glasses may be seen, bodies falling everywhere, medical treatment required, no pain felt, more crisps and nuts ordered, cries for curry/chinky and popadoms get louder. Much whiskey of unpronounceable name ordered, smoke fills the room, everything blurred. Small and medium sized divers may become lost for a time. Visibility affected.

12 Out of Skull

Communications impossible, speech becomes lost in profanities, old grudges surface, past dives recalled in detail, all measurements quadrupled, boat now faster than Exocet, even with twelve divers and two tanks each. The air is filled with foam and spray, smoke is thick, ashtrays are full.

There may be a short lull--

Trips are cancelled, deposits demanded back, organiser is accused of fraud, diving sucks, all equipment for sale, golf clubs bought from fat bloke at bar. Wife arrives with car, followed by total amnesia and coma.

Tourists flock back to Shark el-Sheikh

By JASPER MORTIMER

CAIRO, Egypt (28 Aug 2005) -- A month ago, terror bombings blasted the Red Sea resort of Sharm el-Sheik, killing at least 64 people, devastating a four-star hotel, and sending hundreds of tourists fleeing on the next plane home. But now visitors are returning to Sharm, and Egypt's tourist industry in general _ the country's No. 1 source of foreign currency _ has not collapsed as it did in 1997 when Islamic terrorists shot dead 58 people at a Pharaonic temple in the southern town of Luxor.

"We went overnight from 100 percent (occupancy) to 50 percent," said Werner Gessner, the general manager of the Sonesta Beach Resort and Casino, which has now filled 87 percent of its 520 rooms. "We have really bounced back. It is remarkable that we're recouping so quickly."

Tour operators in Italy, Britain and France said their nationals were now flying to Egypt at full strength or very nearly so.

For the 10 days following the attacks, Sharm hotels averaged only 30 percent occupancy, said Tourism Ministry spokeswoman Hala el Khatib. Now they are running at 62 percent occupancy on average.

In part, the favorable numbers are due to deals that Sharm hotels and other outlets quickly started offering after the attacks. But another reason is simply that, with terrorists attacking in so many places, tourists have become less fearful.

"It's not like it was 10 years ago when 100 percent of people would have canceled," said Christian Rochette of the major operator Nouvelles FrontieresRochette in Paris. "Travelers now know that Paris or London are as dangerous as anywhere else."

In Rome, Veronica Cappennani, a spokeswoman for the Viaggi del Ventaglio tour operator, agreed. "Italians are not deterred because there have been so many attacks worldwide that they're getting used to it," she said.

After the 1997 attack in Luxor, it took tourists two years to return to Egypt in their pre-massacre numbers.

So the Sharm bombings on July 23 _ in the high season for the resort _ raised the specter of a similar setback for the millions of Egyptians whose incomes depend on tourism directly and indirectly.

Sharm and the smaller resorts of south Sinai account for 25 percent of Egypt's hotel rooms, and they draw a quarter of the annual number of tourists.

Italy had initially cautioned its citizens about traveling to Egypt, which added to the gloom in Sharm as Italians traditionally dominate the scene in July and August. But Rome withdrew the warning. And by Aug. 13, the number of Italians arriving in Egypt exceeded the number departing for the first time since the attacks, the head of the Egyptian Tourism Federation El-Hamy el-Zayat said.

The Italian presence in Sharm is "almost the same as this time last year," said Cappennani.

In London, a spokesman for the Association of British Travel Agents, Sean Tipton, said terrorist attacks tend to have "a very short term impact" on Britons.

A spokeswoman for travel agency Thomas Cook said they received only a handful of cancellations for Egypt, and bookings were now back to normal.

In Paris, Rochette of Nouvelles FrontieresRochette said their experience was similar for Sharm bookings. And after the July attacks, they did not see any cancellations for trips to Luxor and Hurgada, another Egyptian resort.

Deals offered by the Egyptian tourism industry have played a role.

Karim el-Minabawy, the head of one of Egypt's biggest travel agencies, Emeco, said foreign tour operators were encouraged by the Tourism Ministry's promise to share the financial risk of chartering a plane they might not be able to fill.

Some hotels dropped the high-season surcharges they normally impose in August, maintaining their July prices.

The 321-room Ritz-Carlton did not alter its prices, but did drop the fee it charges tour operators for cancellations, said spokeswoman Marwa Rakha. In a sign of confidence, it has just reimposed the fee.

The Tourism Ministry's el Khatib predicted the year would end with about 9 million tourists having visited Egypt _ several hundred thousand fewer than had been forecast, but still a rise on the record 8.1 million visitors in 2004.

Still not everyone is so upbeat. Vera Konstanty of Rewe Package Tours in Cologne said Germans remain hesitant about Egypt and bookings have not returned to pre-bombing levels.

And in Sharm, not everything is back to normal. The Ghazala Gardens Hotel, which bore the worst explosion, remains closed. A facade of white canvas masks the wrecked building from the street. The restoration will take months.

Checkpoints are much more numerous. Wary of car-bombs, police check the identity papers of anybody in a vehicle.

And fears of another attack are keeping many tourists off the streets at night.

Estartit October 2005

Well somehow I've been nominated to do the write up. At least I can give my own version of events. Thursday night was spent fitting the top box on the car in the pitch black. Clive very kindly provided us with walkie talkies so that the two cars could stay easily in contact. We decided to catch the train across. We were put in different queues but no problems as we have the radios to talk to each other. Neil switched his own and entered into a conversation with a girl about a pizza.

We arrived in Estartit at about 3.30pm Spanish time. We sorted out our apartments. Not too bad a view, we had about a 3 minute walk in the morning to get on the boat. Once settled in we went to the Dive Centre to meet up with Peter and Jacqui, and to arrange the diving. We thought that the best place to discuss the diving would be the bar across the road.

Our first dive was on the Sunday and we boarded the boat at 11.00am, after a much needed lie in after the long drive down.

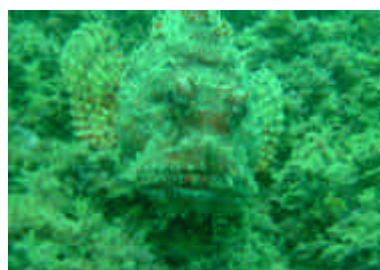

There was plenty of space for kitting up as there were few other people on the boat since it was coming to the end of the season, although Peter stays open all year round. Some afternoons we were the only people on the boat.

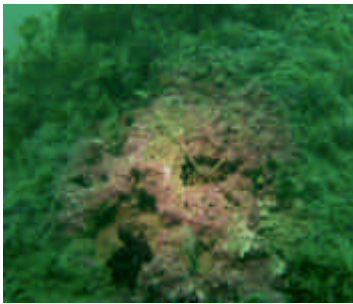

We tended to dive on the Islands in the morning and along the shore in the afternoons, a lot depended on the weather. We were very lucky, the week before there had been high winds, rain and flooding with the visibility going down to about a metre. Each day the visibility improved. After few days it settled down to about 10 metres plus.

The diving was all scenic, at most sites you were able to chose your own depth, depending on what you wanted to see. There was a variety of wild life, the fish we saw the most was the scowling scorpion fish, which were very well camouflaged and it was quite easy to put your hand on one if you weren't careful. There was a good supply of octopus of all different sizes. But there were very few crustaceans as the octopus had eaten the majority of them. Away from the Islands there were more spiny lobsters about. For the marine biologists there were lots of invertebrates of all different shapes and sizes, enough to keep everyone happy.

My favourite dives were all the caves and tunnels, everything from the huge tunnel swim through of Dolfi ( so named because there is a statue of a Dolphin at the end of the tunnel) to the 100 metre long dark tunnel just round the corner from Dolfi. The cave life was as good as the life outside the caves. Diving in cave and caverns is a totally different type of diving, but good fun. For those of you who have been to Estartit before some of the places we dived on the Islands were, Dolfi; Feronelles; Medalott; Illa Fariol; Illa Pedrossa; La Vaca and Salpatxot.

One of the most important diving days was Friday. Why you ask? well it was Claire's birthday, well Claire's real birthday was on the Saturday but since we would be travelling most of the day we decided to bring it a day forward. We told Claire that we would meet at the bottom of the shot to take a group photo. Down we all went Claire had managed to borrow Graham's scooter, so while we were waiting for everyone to meet up she was buzzing round in small circles. Finally everyone was there. Claire was presented with a birthday card. Then her birthday cake, and knife to cut it. Then lots of balloons were tied to her, it made her buoyancy a bit difficult.

The party carried on into the evening, with lots of streamers and balloons, and of course food and alcohol.

A good time was had by every one.

To sum up the week:

The weather was good;

The diving was excellent;

And

The company outstanding!

( so..... when are we going again?)

Have You Shot Your Buddy Recently?

We are making up some mugshots of club members (see below) and I need your help.
The mugshots will be on display at the club evenings, and also be put onto our website.

The mugshots have two distinct advantages:

- A New members can recognise existing club members (e.g. who to go to for training / payments / booking things or simply general advice).
- B Existing members can recognise new members (e.g. who they are training that night / meeting at the Cove etc).

Land: Head and Shoulders
Type Shot, preferably recent and 'natural' You can choose how you want to be seen by the club members

Name	Roger Holmes
Started Diving	2000
Current Grade	Advanced

Underwater: Needs to be cut down to the shape shown (difficult as most people dive horizontal!). Trainees will have these pictures added when they have been in open water!

We have a reasonable number of photos of people on land (but certainly not all), and we have a limited number of underwater pictures! For the land shots we would prefer 'natural' portraits (rather than the passport style – stood against the wall and shot). So if you have any photographs (preferably digital – but I can scan photos if necessary) of yourself on land and/or anyone underwater I would be very grateful if you could send them to me. Also I will need your details (Started diving, joined club, current grade and any instructor qualifications)

Dive Time Competition

UPDATE

Well the first month of the competition is almost over and it is time to give you an update.

First a few mundane facts & figures:

In November, up to the time of writing there has been 41 dives , spread across 15 divers, all the dives so far have been at Stoney Cove! – but plenty of time for more sites.

There are three people who have been in the water for over 200 minutes, but the current leaders are:

1 st	Pete Barnard	264 minutes over 6 dives
2 nd	Kevin Parker	237 minutes over 5 dives
3 rd	Phil Turney	222 minutes over 5 dives

This is much more of a '1 Horse Race' – well... '1 Instructor Race'

1st (and only) Neil Tomlin 43 minutes over 2 dives

But there is plenty of time to knock these people off their perches, so don't forget:

- Let Neil Brown know if you are going diving.
- Fill in the Marshal Sheet and let Neil have it.

You can probably get the Marshal sheets off me, or they can be downloaded from:

http://lsac.cjb.cc/downloads/marshal\_slate.pdf
